

Admin Control Panel Guide

What every menu item under the Admin Control Panel is for, with a screenshot of each — and, for Website Management, how to create or amend the site content it controls.

Source note: Every screenshot and every factual claim on this page is drawn from the application's actual code, captured directly from the running app by `scripts/screenshots/admin-menu-tour.spec.ts` against the isolated test database — run `npm run screenshots:admin-menu` to regenerate them, then `npm run guide:admin-menu-pdf` to re-export this page as `admin-control-panel-guide.pdf`.

Logged in as: these screenshots use an ordinary admin account, not a super admin. Three controls are hidden for a plain admin and are called out where relevant: the Business email field on Content Control, the Delete all button on Audit Log, and the on/off toggle on Test Mode.

The landing page after logging in as an admin — a “Daily Overview” for a selected date (change it with the date picker at the top). Shows new online bookings awaiting confirmation, bookings at risk because a dog’s vaccinations are lapsing, three occupancy summary cards (Home Boarding, Day Care, and other service types), and a to-do list filterable by staff assignee. Everything here links through to the relevant screen — nothing is created or edited on this page itself.

Search customers by name or email and open any result to see their full detail page. New customer records aren’t created from this list — they come from a customer registering themselves at `/register`, or an admin adding one over the phone from the Bookings screen (see the separate Create Account & Log In guide for both of those journeys).

Waitlist

Grouped by service and date, in the order customers joined. When a space opens up, it's automatically offered to whoever is first in line.

No one is currently on a waitlist.

Two things live here: bookings needing attention because a dog's vaccination has lapsed, and waitlist groups (by service and date) with an "Offer to next in line" button to notify whoever's waiting next. Customers join the waitlist themselves — there's no admin-authored "add to waitlist" form.

Website Management

Everything under here edits what the public website shows, or what customers are asked to agree to — the one part of the Admin Control Panel covered in extra depth below, since "how do I change X on the site" is the most common admin question.

A long settings page — around fifteen independent sections, each with its own Save button — covering everything from the business's contact details to opening hours, FAQs, testimonials, and VAT settings. Only the top of the page is shown here (a full-page capture of all fifteen sections would be one unreadably long image); the next screenshot drills into one section as a worked example.

To amend any section on this page: edit its fields and click that section's own Save button, as shown here for "Business details" — which feeds the site header/footer, the contact page, and the footer of every outgoing email. Every section works the same way. One exception: the Business email section further down is hidden from a plain admin and only editable by a super admin.

Our Terms and Conditions

Upload the terms customers must sign before booking as a PDF. Customers see a link to this document (opening in a new tab) on the sign-agreement page. To publish a new version: choose a PDF under “Publish a new version” — this enables the “Publish version N” button.

18 Publish confirmation — read before clicking

The screenshot displays the 'Bedlay Gardens' user interface. A modal dialog box is open, titled 'Publish version 4?'. The dialog contains the following text: 'Every customer — including anyone who signed an earlier version — will be asked to sign Bedlay-Gardens-User-Guide.pdf as version 4 before their next booking. Once published this document can't be swapped out or edited — only superseded by publishing another version. This cannot be undone.' Below the text are two buttons: 'Cancel' and 'Yes, publish'.

Version	Published	Status	Published	Published
Version 3	20 August 2020	Published	Published	New PDF
Version 2	20 August 2020	Superseded	Published	New PDF
Version 1	17 August 2020	Superseded	Published	New PDF

Clicking “Publish version N” opens this confirmation before anything happens.

Publishing is irreversible: every customer — including anyone who already signed an earlier version — is immediately asked to sign the new one before their next booking, and the old version can never be restored or edited, only superseded by publishing another.

Test Mode

A site-wide switch for safely creating test data. While on: every new dog gets its vaccination and Meet & Greet checks bypassed automatically, and every outgoing email is redirected to the business email address instead of the real recipient.

Only a super admin can view or change this.

A safety switch for creating test data without accidentally emailing real customers — while on, every new dog's vaccination/Meet & Greet checks are bypassed and outgoing email is redirected to the business address. The toggle itself is super-admin-only; a plain admin sees the description but not the control, as shown here.

Generated from `scripts/screenshots/admin-menu-tour.spec.ts` against Bedlay Gardens' isolated test database, logged in as a plain admin (not a super admin). Screenshots reflect the application at the time they were last captured, not necessarily the current live site.
